If Red Square is the heart of Moscow, historic Arbat Street is the soul of the city. This street is without a doubt one of the most famous in the Russian capital, if not the most famous, perhaps along with Tverskaya Street. Commercial and touristy, full of shops, restaurants and street artists, it is almost all pedestrian-only

In the 15th century, this street was occupied by merchants and master craftsmen, and many churches began to be built on it. Later, in the 18th century, the Russian nobility saw it as the most prestigious place in which to live. Nowadays this urban artery is one of the major tourist attractions in Moscow.

Metro tour

Learn the incredible story about the Moscow Metro to get a better appreciation of why it is not just a city transportation system but doubles as an underground public art gallery! Hear about the 2 secret lines and discover where to find amazing monuments of Russian sailors, workers, sportsmen and a warship captain who danced with Queen Elizabeth II on the coronation ball. Visit 3 of the most interesting stations, such as Komsomolskaya, Novoslobodskaya and Revolutionary Square. Discover the best art and architecture from the days of the Soviet Union as you marvel at stations built from marble, and see bright mosaic panels and bronze and granite statues that date back to the Soviet era.
